

Kid Cartoonist Completes Commitment

He may only be 11 years old, but Bloomsberg Public School student Stephen Squires is making a difference through giving to the Norfolk General Hospital Foundation. Stephen is a budding cartoonist. Last February, he started his own business with the goal of raising money for the NGH Labour and Delivery unit. Each commissioned cartoon is skillfully crafted for the client. He asked very little for each piece, only 50 cents. However, his clients have been very generous, giving a hundred or more times that to help Stephen in his cause. He has kept nothing for himself. Now, after 3 installments at the NGH Foundation office, his latest being $174.55, Stephen has donated over $1,000 - $1,001 to be exact! "He is likely the youngest person to have their name on the Foundation Donor Wall. Stephen is really a wonderful young man" stated Julie Powell Director of Development NGH Foundation.
