Keeping It Local

The Norfolk General Hospital Foundation gratefully accepted a donation of $15,000 from Rassaun Steel of Simcoe. Kevin Saunders and Nadia Saunders of Rassaun Steel presented the cheque to Julie Powell, NGH Foundation Director of Development on Friday morning. The donation will go toward the Building a Better Hospital Campaign.

"Contributions from our local business community are so important to helping us maintain health care services at NGH. We so appreciate Rassaun Steel's commitment to care in Norfolk" said Julie Powell.

"Rassaun decided to donate to Norfolk General Hospital to support our community" explained Nadia Saunders. "Keep everything grounded and close to home. We have a big sense of family at our business and we just wanted to keep it close to home and keep it local."

The Building a Better Hospital Campaign will support the renovation and revitalization of the hospital’s Labour & Delivery, Day Surgery and Minimally Invasive Suite. The NGH Foundation is collecting donations to fund this $13 million project. NGH will not receive any money from upper levels of government for this project.

RASSAUN STEEL, located in Simcoe, is a multi-trade mechanical-electrical contracting and custom fabrication business with 80 plus employees servicing customers all over Southern Ontario.
