Norfolk General Hospital has been awarded a Quality Health care Workplace Award at the Silver level. The award was presented Tuesday November 4, at the HealthAchieve 2014 Convention during the 90th anniversary of the Ontario Hospital Association at the Metro Toronto Convention Centre. This is the third Silver level award to NGH in as many years.

“We are very encouraged to know that we continue on the right track to providing an environment that maximizes the health and wellbeing of our staff, we know that this also leads to improved quality patient experiences,” said Kelly Isfan, NGH president and CEO.

The Quality Healthcare Workplace Awards (QHWA), launched in 2010, is a partnership of the Ontario Hospital Association and the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care’s HealthForceOntario. The awards recognize efforts to improve the health care workplace and are designed to encourage self-evaluation, learning, and improvement.
